Reading activities

General ideas for teaching reading

There are many activities that you can do with learners to stimulate their interest in a particular book and in reading. There are different activities you can do before you start reading a book, while reading a book and after reading a book.

Pre-Reading Activities

Discuss with learners what attracted them to this book and why they want to read it.

Ask the learners to identify the author, illustrator, publisher, language of publication and other features of the book. This helps the learners get a feel for the book and to get a sense of the complexity of the book production process.

Ask them to predict what the book is about using the summary on the back of the book, the cover illustration and the title to guide them. The more learners know about the book, the easier it will be for them to read. Remember, predictions should make sense rather than be “right”.

Different ways of reading books in the classroom

Facilitator reading aloud

You are the role model for fluent reading and should read aloud to the class as often as possible. By reading aloud to the class and by sharing their own reading with learners, you send the message that reading is important. By hearing stories that are slightly too difficult to read on their own, learners become familiar with different types of language and the conventions of how stories work.

You should read enthusiastically and with expression. The first reading of the book should be without interruption, at a natural speed - the purpose is to entertain and engage the learners.

Learners reading silently/Independent reading

Learners become better readers by reading. Learners must be given time to read quietly to themselves. Independent reading improves learners' reading ability and comprehension skills.

Formal follow-up to independent reading is not required every time. Sometimes you may ask learners to respond to what they have read by writing something down. Other times learners may be asked to discuss what they have read, and their reactions to what they have read, with each other or you.

Learners reading aloud

- All read together

Each learner should have a copy of the book. Learners read together as a class or read in groups.

For a short story with a recognisable sequence of events, the text can be copied onto strips. The illustrations can be enlarged and put on the wall. The text strips and the pictures can be read aloud by the class. The text and pictures can also be manipulated afterwards to reinforce learning about logic, the development of the plot and the chronology of events in the story.

- Shared reading

You read aloud and the learners follow (silently) in their own books. You can stop and ask a learner to read the next sentence or paragraph. You can also read parts of the text again, or stop and make a point, or stop and discuss what is being read.

- Paired/buddy reading

When the text is familiar, learners of different abilities can be paired up. The pair reads the same sentences or paragraphs together in chorus. The less efficient reader, when using this method, reads bigger chunks of text at a time. This increases comprehension of what is read. This strategy also gives the weak reader a demonstration of fluent reading.

- Echo reading

Learners repeat sentences after the facilitator or another learner has read them. This is a very useful technique to use with learners who are having difficulty reading.

After reading

Summarise the story

Ask learners to summarise the story or re-tell the story in their own words. In this way you can be sure that they have understood the story. Learners can also ask questions about what they do not understand in the story.

Narrator/Point of view

Talk to the learners about whose point of view the story is written from. Discuss the narrator of the story and how this affects the story.

Round Robin story-telling

Write an introduction to the story on a page and ask each member of the class to add two sentences to the story. You can use the story read in class or you can make up another story. If your learners are not ready to do this much writing, you can do this exercise orally.

Act out the story

Some stories lend themselves to being acted out. This works best when there are a few characters in the story or when the story has some action.

Stories can be acted out without using the actual words from the book. Learners can act out the story using their own words. This is a useful way to check that they have understood the story and an opportunity for learners to practice using some of the words they remember from the book.

A role-play is when the facilitator gives the learners their roles. Sometimes s/he may ask one of the learners to be the narrator. The narrator then reads the story while the other learners do the actions.

Another way to act out the story is for each learner to have a copy of the book and to read the part you have given them (i.e. the direct speech) while doing relevant actions. A narrator in this case can just read the narrative i.e. all the parts that are not in direct speech.

Discuss characters and themes/issues in the story

When discussing characters and themes, the purpose is to get readers to express opinions and back these up with evidence from the story.

The role of the facilitator is to:

- encourage discussion
- encourage the use of logical reasoning to support opinions.

The purpose is not to get the group to reach consensus or to agree with the facilitator's point of view.

Characters

We learn about characters based on what they say, what they do or what they think. Different characters make the story interesting and influence what happens in the story.

Examples of the kinds of questions that can be asked about characters are:

- Who is the central character in the story?
- Why do you think this?
- How did the various characters in the story feel?
- How do you know this? (What did they do, say or think?)

Themes/issues

Before you have a discussion about themes/issues, think about the story yourself and identify what you think the key themes/issues are. You should avoid moralising to the learners. Remember they are adults.

When you have identified themes for yourself, think about what kinds of questions might relate to those themes and prepare a list to guide you when you discuss the themes of the story. Do not ask readers/learners to identify themes for themselves. This is quite a difficult concept and requires a lot of practice.

Oral/written book reviews

You can ask learners to respond to the book they have read, either orally or in writing. This can be a guided response – in other words, the learners can be given a question to answer (for example, “Did you like this book? Give reasons for your answer” or “Who else in the class would enjoy this book? Give reasons for your answer”). Book reviews can be an effective tool in getting learners to motivate each other to read.

Suggestions for *Going home with chickens

Different books lend themselves to different after-reading activities. The activities chosen will depend on the type of learners in the class. Here are some suggestions for Going home with chickens.

Summarise the story

Ask learners to summarise the story to check for understanding. This can be done in various ways. As this story has a definite sequence of events, it lends itself to the “Round Robin” method of story-telling mentioned in the previous section.

Guessing and/or predicting

Encourage learners to guess or predict what happens in the story. Questions such as “What do you think happened to Thobela’s chickens?” can be given to the learners before the book is read in class. Guiding questions will get learners to think about what they are reading. Remember that there are no right or wrong answers, but answers should make sense.

Discuss issues raised in the book

Themes in this book include the migrant labour system, drought, surprises and family relationships. Discuss some or all of these issues with the learners.

Discuss characters in the story

Discuss with learners what they know about the various characters in the book and how they know. Encourage them to support what they say about the characters by using “evidence” from the book.

Re-write the ending of the story

Ask learners to write a different ending for the story. Encourage them to use their imagination, but the story must still make sense and must be logical.

Story-telling

Ask learners to tell each other a story

- about a nice surprise that they have had in their lives or
- a home-coming after a long time away from their family
- a long journey they went on

You can choose the good stories to write down and you can type them and photocopy them to read in class. Ask learners in the class to ask the story-teller questions if they do not understand the story properly.

Language Worksheets

How to use New Readers Publishers' Worksheets

Introduction

We developed these worksheets to make it easier for you, the facilitator, to prepare your learners for assessment at level 1.

- We have made sure that the worksheets cover all the outcomes for Communication in English at ABET level 1. You will see that each section of the worksheet lists the specific outcomes that are being met by the exercises in that section.
- We have made sure that the layout of the worksheets is very similar to the layout of the IEB exams. This will help learners to become familiar with exam style assessment. If they are comfortable with the layout, they will be less nervous during the exam.
- We have used all the different assessment methods that you will find in an IEB exam. For example: gap fills, true/false, short answer questions. This will give learners a chance to practice using the different methods. It also means that they will not get confused by the instructions, as they will know what is expected of them.

How the worksheets work

The worksheets are divided into four sections. As we mentioned above, three of these sections are directly in line with the layout of the IEB exams, which, in turn, is based on the Unit Standards for Communications, Level 1. The first three sections are:

A. Comprehension (this section tests reading skills)

B. Functional language (this section tests applying literacy skills to real life)

C. Writing (this section tests the learner's ability to write a short text)

The fourth section is not included in the IEB exams, but is important for learners in their development of communication skills. We have called this section:

D. Grammar and vocabulary work (this section tests the formal language skills of the learner)

Here are some suggestions on how to make best use of these worksheets, section by section. Of course, you are encouraged to use them in whichever way best suits you and your learners.

Section A: Comprehension

1. Read the book

Start by reading the book you have chosen. You can read the book out loud to your learners, you can give each learner a chance to read out loud or you can ask learners to read quietly to themselves. You can also do a combination of all three. Remember, in the exams learners have to read the exam text silently. They will not be able to read out loud and you will not be able to help them. With this in mind, is it advisable that you give your learners practice in silent reading. You can check comprehension by asking the learners oral questions about the book. Make sure that they understand the story before you begin with the worksheets.

2. Answer the questions orally

Before you ask the learners to write the answers onto their worksheets, discuss the questions and answers together. For example, give different learners a chance to say if a question is true or false. It is very useful for learners to be given a chance to answer questions orally first. This checks understanding and gives you a chance to clear up confusions. You could also have learners work together in pairs. Encourage them to discuss the questions and help each other. You should move between the groups asking questions or helping if necessary. This gives the learners the opportunity to practice speaking in English and we know how important that is. Often the only chance they have to speak English is the few hours they spend in the classroom.

3. Write down the answers to the questions

After oral discussion and questions, encourage the learners to work individually on writing down the answers. This will give you a good indication of who is struggling and who is able to cope. You might need to give the learners who are struggling extra support or extra exercises.

Let your learners write the answers on the worksheets. It is not a good idea for them to write out the answers on separate pieces of paper because this will not happen in the exam. The closer their experience is to the real exam, the more prepared they will be when the time comes.

4. Understand the different question types.

In section A, you will find literal questions, interpretive questions and opinion questions. This is what they mean:

- Literal questions - means that the answers are clearly written somewhere in the text.
- Interpretive questions - means that the answers are not written in the text but are implied. In other words, the learner needs to read beyond the words and to come to understand things that may not be there in black and white. They need to understand more than just the words that are written down.
- Opinion questions - means that the answers must come from the learner's own experience. The answer will not be in the text and the learner must say what s/he thinks and give his/her own opinion.

Here is an example of the three types of questions. First read the short text below.

John was ready to go out. He looked out of the window. Then he opened his cupboard, picked up his umbrella and went outside.

Question: What did John take with him?

Answer: His umbrella.

This is a literal question. The answer is in the text.

Question: What was the weather like?

Answer: It was raining.

This is an interpretive question. The answer is not clearly given in the text but there is a clue (the umbrella)

Question: What weather do you like? Why do you say so?

Answer: I like summer because I like swimming in the sea

This is an opinion question. The answer does not come from the text but from the learner's own experience.

In the IEB exams and in these worksheets, please note the following:

If the instruction says Answer the question this means that the learner will be asked literal questions.

If the instruction says Think about the question, this means the learner will be asked interpretive questions.

If the instruction says Write your opinion, this means the learner will be asked to give his/her opinion.

Learners need to practice all three types of questions. Often facilitators concentrate on literal questions only. You must give your learners practice in answering interpretive questions because this helps them to become critical readers. As the exams progress (ABET Levels 2, 3, 4,) learners are asked more and more interpretive questions.

Section B - Functional Language

If you read the outcomes for Section B, you will see that learners can be given an advert, a notice, a form or anything else they are likely to find in the real world. They need to be able to apply their literacy skills to real life. We have included forms and adverts but we suggest that you introduce your learners to other pieces of everyday, real-life text.

In these worksheets we have asked learners to fill in forms for themselves and also to fill them in as though they are the characters in the story. In a level 1 exam, learners will only be expected to fill in the forms for themselves. However, teaching them to do something more difficult is good preparation for future assessment.

If some of the exercises are difficult, do them together orally first. Make sure everyone understands what is needed before they begin to write.

Section C - Writing

Learners need to practice their writing as well as their reading. At level 1 they are expected to write a short text. Learners at this level only need to be able to write 5 or 6 lines of text. You need to help them to write interesting and connected sentences.

It is not meeting the outcomes if a learner writes:

There is a dog.
Here is a man.
There is a boy.

Your learners must be able to make some connection between their sentences. For example:

Here is a boy.
He plays with the dog.
He loves the dog.
The man is his father.
His father calls to him.

This means the learner is trying to write a real story and there is a connection between the ideas in the story.

The best way for learners to practice writing is to first tell stories orally. Learners can look at pictures in small groups and try to come up with a short story. After the idea is firmly in everyone's mind they can then try to write the story onto paper. Don't worry too much about spelling and grammar errors. At level 1, they will not lose marks for a few mistakes as long as the meaning is clear.

Other ideas for writing practice can include the following:

- Have learners edit each others work. This will help them become more aware of their own mistakes.
- Have learners read their stories onto a tape recorder. These can then be played back to the rest of the class.
- After a story has been edited, you can type it out and hand it around for others to read as part of a lesson.
- Get learners to illustrate their stories. They can cut pictures out of magazines or draw their own pictures. This will help them understand the idea of a 'project', which they will have to do at level 3.

Section D - Grammar and vocabulary

Even though grammar, vocabulary and sentence structure are not tested on their own in the exams, your learners need to build up their language skills if they are to read with comprehension or write in a comprehensible manner.

Some of the exercises (for example, alphabetical order) may need a short lesson beforehand. Look through the Section D in each worksheet and decide what language skill you want to teach your learners. Then use the worksheet to assess whether or not they have understood the particular skill.

We have included things like prepositions, vocabulary, tenses, plurals and many more parts of language. These will add to the strong foundation that you are helping your learners to build.
